This full-color image will allow you to zoom in on the PDF and get a better look at my fabric placement, particularly in the reversed/reflected blocks.

It would be difficult to get perfect reflections unless we start with fabrics that contain mirror images; so we fool the eye by using fabrics of varying value and prints to create what we see as a reflection.

Reflections can be a subtle thing depending on light and angle of view. When viewing a reflection in water the waves often disturb the image.

Reflecting on moments in our lives is a subjective view, dependent on your state of mind at the time.

Take time for reflection!
